The Government owns 1,100 acres of ground on what is known as the old Lie estate, or Arlington, as it is more familiarly called. Of this number only about three hundred acres are used for purely Government purposes, the remaining 800 acres being occupied by colored people, who mainly live in ramshackle dwellings. The latter section lies south of the old Lee mansion and the Soldiers' National Cemetery. The 300 acres first named are occupied by Fort Myer (the cavalry post), and the cemetery wherein lie the remains of hundreds of thousands of Union soldiers.

Mr. Clements' proposition is to establish a great Government agricultural station and experiment farm on the 800 acros now and experiment farm on the 800 acros now occupied by the negroes; to connect this with the mall in the vicinity of Washington Monament by means of a memorial bridge representing the cementing or reunion of the North and South-or a Columbus memorial bridge—and the construction of suitable buildings on the farm and an immense amphilheatre on the crest of the slope where the Lee mansion stands. The cost to the Government in security the cost to the Government in securing the Arlington estate, Mr. Clements said, footed up about $150,000. There would be little cost attached to the

There would be little rost attached to the experiment station and farm project, say those interested, the ground being already the property of the Government. Turn it over to Secretary Rusk and let him figure out the cost. The amplitheatre sitting on the crest of the green hills and the bridge would add immensely to the beauty of Washington's surroundings. The amphitheatre could be in the nature of a memorial hall to the nation's dead, who sleep in the surrounding city of eternity.

"The country in the section mentioned," said the projector, "is much more pretty and picturesque than Rock Creek, and affords a delightful view of Washington, the Potomae and surrounding country. The Agricultural Department officials standing at the windows of the Department building, could, with the aid of glasses, see their men at work on the experiment farm. The soil is rich and well adapted to the purpose of experimenting, and the bridge would make it easy of access."

Speaking of the general undesirability of the negro settlement being allowed to re-main, he said that the Alexandria County main, he said that the Alexandria County authorities cannot go on the reservation to repair the reads or to preserve order when becessary, and as the occupants are expecting yearly to be evicted by Uncle Sam they allow houses and land to go to rack. Also, that during the small-pox epidemic in that vicinity the patients were a heavy load on the county authorities. He said it was a verifable Hottentot village and that strangers would hardly believe that there was such a collection of shantles under the very shadow of the Capitol dome.

Should the Government decide to establish the farm and station and construct the amplitheatre, an old law, which was enacted at the request of General Washington, would have to be repealed. The law in question provides that no Government buildings shall be constructed west of the Potomae River.

General Banks, Representative Wise and General Lee all express themselves favorable to the project, and a bill will, no doubt, soon be introduced.

SEARCHING IN LOUISVILLE'S RUINS FOR THE VICTIMS.

Energetic Messures of Relief Promptly Taken by Public-Spirited Citizens of the Stricken City Less Loss of Life Than Was Feared.

LOUISVILLE, March 29.-It is now pretty near a certainty that the entire less of life from the tornado in this city will not go much above one hundred, if that number is reached. Up to this writing the total number killed at all places whose bodies have been recovered and of the missing who it is reasonably certain are dead, is 88. In addition to these there are about a -dozen who are so badly injured that death may ensue, elthough fatal results are not anticipated in most of the cases. Anywhere from 150 to 200 persons are injured to an extent worth noticing, and probably 500 to 1,000 have very slight scratches or bruises that do not inconvenience them.

The streets in the district worst damaged are still picketed, but, except between Eleventh and Twelfth on Mar ket streets, the street cars now run freely, and wagons, and all but mere sightseers are allowed to pass. Hundreds of men are busy trying to save stocks of goods and private property. The excellent work done by the Board of Trade committees in canvassing and learning the names of actual residents and sufferers in the storm-stricken section renders imposition for purposes of robbery next to impossible, and the people are allowed to go freely to their ruined homes with friends and employes and rescue what they can. Many of those employed at work in the wreckage are paid by the Board of Trade committee, and when-ever help is deserved it is given. ### A Sketch of the City.

Louisville is altuated on the south bank of the Ohio River. It has an area of thirteen square miles and a water front of eight miles, occupying an almost level site about seventy feet above low-water mark. Its plan is regular and spacious, and in the residential portion the houses, for the most part, are sur-rounded by lawns and gardens. Among the public buildings of importance are the City Hall, Court House, Public Li-beary, the Female High School, the Roman Catholic Cathodral, the Indus-trial Exhibition Building and the State Lonisville is one of the most beautiful

The final string of the Labor Conference was held to day. Sir John Gorst thanked the Emperor for summening the conference, The decisions of the conference, the hell soon be published, in addition to those already announced by cable, recommend the optional establishment of courts of arbitration, consisting of representatives of the employers and the employed, to settle labor dispute, and the graems observance of Sunday as a holiday in all trades. In 1778 Colonel George Rogers Clarke, on his way down the Ohio, left a company of settlers who took possession of en Island (no longer existing), near the Kentucky shore above the falls. In the following year the first rude cluster of cabins appeared on the site of the present city. An act of the Virginia Legislature in 1780 gave the little set-ilement the rank of a town and called Louisville, in Loner of Louis XVI. of France, then assisting the American colonies in their struggle for independence. The rank of city was conferred by the Kentucky Legislature in 1828. From the time of the introduction of steam navigation on the Ohio by Fulton in 1812, Louisville rapidly gained in importance as a centre of river trade. Owing to its position at the head of the "Falls of the Ohio," which obstruction long made necessary the transfer of goods at this point, the city became an important depot of supplies for the cot-ton-growing States lying immediately to the south. The owners of plantations in those States devoting themrelied upon Kentucky for their supplies of wheat and other cereals, hempen bagging and rope, and for mules and horses, large droves of which were annually driven south from Louisville. That city, accordingly, grew rapidly in importance. It was also for many years one of the principal pork packing points in the United States.

After the war largely increased rail-way facilities resulted in a marked increase in the growth of Louisville's commercial and manufacturing intersts, notwithstanding a considerable deline in its river trade. The extensive obacco crop of Kentucky, with much of that of neighboring States, now find a market in Louisville, and the city has become probably the largest tobacco market of the world. Its manufacture of whisky is very important, as also are

The municipal mithorities are organizing a grand formal reception to the American riflemen, with an exenting garden rit, and a "commons" to close the meeting. A trip will be taken on the Rhine to Ruelesholm and Bingen, where a two-days' rifle meeting will be held. At the last State concert Mrs. Photos, wife of the American Minister, was seated among the wives of the Ambassadors. The Prince of Whiles asked Sir Edward Malet, the French, Ambassador, to present him during an interview in the performance. They conversed together until the performance was resumed. This is significant as aboving the desire of the government to compensate the American Munister for his inferiority in rank, which precides his all mittance to the more private bestivities of the court to which ambassadors are invited.

The House Committee on Naval Affairs vesterday completed the Naval Appropriation bill, and Chairman Boutelle will report it to the House to morrow. The bill carries a total sppropriation of $22,151,523, which is about $3,400,000 less than the estimates submitted by the Department, although these estimates did not in clude any provision for increase of the Navy. The total appropriation is $159. oth over than the appropriation for the

The most interesting features of the bill are those relating to new construction, and under this head the committee has made provision for four new vessels. While this is a smaller number than was expected, the committee in its report will call attention to the fact that the vessels authorized to be built are of a class far beyond anything our naval architects have yet undertaken in size.

First, the bill provides for the con-struction of three sea going, coast line of battle ships of about 8,500 tons, designed to carry the heaviest armor Hicks of this city, who has achieved a reputation as a weather prophet, and who predicted the late storm with wonderful accuracy, now gives a forecast for April, which includes numerous marked changes in temperature and three dis-

This is not specified in the bill, but the intention is to have constructed ships carrying seventeen Inches of armor and correspondingly heavy guns. They are to carry coal enough to enable them to steam at the most economical not visited by the terrible cyclone which devastated Louisville. In view of a persistent feeling of uncertainty displayed by respectable organs of the press in regard to the meaning on the decree of Deember 23 in relation to their decree of Deember 23 in relation to their liberty to express their opinions it is necessary to declare that decree did not alter the previous state of freedom and responsibility. The interest of the Provisional Government resultes undependence in the discussion of its acts.

It is probable that there will now be more activity in pointent affairs. It is reported that a new paper under the management of some of the old politicians will soon be established in this city.
